SURVEY OF INTELLIGENCE INFORMATION SYSTEMS

The Office of Training announces a second offering of the popular three-week "Survey of Intelligence Information Systems." This interagency course is designed to introduce professional intelligence personnel to the uses of information handling systems and their applications in the Intelligence Community.

Each student will be taught to use a computer terminal and to apply computer library programs to intelligence problems. Fundamental techniques applying the principle of Information Science to the solution of intelligence analytic problems will be demonstrated. Field trips to Intelligence Community agencies will emphasize the role of computer-based intelligence information handling systems. Selected developments throughout the Intelligence Community will be described by members of the Information Science faculty and guest speakers.

OBJECTIVES:

   1. To familiarize the student with the capabilities, limitations, contents, and applicability of major operational intelligence systems in the Intelligence Community.

   2. To introduce the student to developments in Systems Concepts as a vehicle for the cross-fertilization of techniques and ideas throughout the Intelligence Community.
